When my kids were small, I trained them to repeat a phrase so they could understand my love for them and create a deep sense of belonging with God. After the family would have a good experience, I'd say "why did I do that for you?" They would say "because you love me." Then I would ask them why I loved them. They would respond, "because God loves me and gave me a dad who loves me."

The family is the first building block of any civilization. Nothing can replace the nuclear family, which is continually under attack by tyrannical communism that has infiltrated our government, institutions, and cultural groups. When the goals of communism are known, a quick glance at the cultural landscape reveals all the proofs of its identity and pervasiveness.

"The Communist Manifesto" calls for the abolishment of "eternal truths, it abolishes all religion, and all morality." It says the family "will vanish as a matter of course."

Wiping out the family allows morality, traditions, and belief in God to deteriorate. God is a threat to communism, because the communist government must be the ultimate authority and object of trust.

The more the family is divided, the less we can build on each other for our emotional, material, and societal needs. To this end, communist movements push for the destruction of marriage. It aims to turn men and women against each other and children against their parents. It advocates for a diminished parental influence, moving children to state-controlled education systems to fill the parental void.

Communism creates a cultural divide that devalues men and shapes them to be oppressors. It claims women must seize the traditional domains of men for themselves, because men have forced women into an identity, they do not desire.

The left is mirroring the communist agenda and destroying our families. They created toxic masculinity to divide men against women. Sexual freedom, to treat intimate bonds like an economic commodity... more war on the family. Now, the unthinkable sexualization of our children will lead to the same disconnected prison to further diminish the family.

When one opposes this destruction, the left claims morality is subjective, and truth does not exist. Women can be men and men can be women. Then, when we oppose the lunacy, we are told we are intolerant and bigoted. Victimhood and hatred are required for further division. The government is now convincing parents that the problem is not the result of the deterioration of the family, but that the child needs more freedom to pursue their own sexuality, preference, or gender. This is destroying families to create government allegiance.

It is important for Americans to understand how far we have come from what our founding fathers intended. Life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness are not accomplished through government control and cultural influence.

The truth is that respect for differences between men and women give stability to the family structure and sets a good example for respect, forgiveness, and harmony with others. It solidifies society and moral order. Our founders understood this.

None of the other issues facing our state will matter if we do not fight tyranny. We must preserve the family if we are going to preserve our country.
